Basic Tennis Etiquette

Call the Score

If you're serving, make sure to call the score before every point. This not only lets your opponent know you're ready to serve, but also prevents score disputes later.

Respect the Neighbors

Don't roll balls behind or onto someone else's court during a point. If a ball comes onto your court from another match, wait until they have finished their point to return their ball or roll it back to the fence in-between your two courts (but not behind their court where they could potentially trip and fall). Even if you roll the ball out of harm's way during a point, at least one side will see that ball rolling behind the court and might become distracted, stopping the point (which will have to be played over).

If your ball goes onto or behind another court, don't retrieve it if the players are playing a point. If a ball rolls behind a player or players who don't see it and they might injure themselves by stepping on it, you might need to warn them. However, this can cause them to stop playing a point they might have won, getting you a lecture. In these situations, the other player may not appreciate your warning, or lack thereof, as they are focused on their game. Use your best judgment, and with practice your knowledge of when to give warnings will improve."

Fair Warmups

Before a match, players have five minutes or so to warm up. This is not practice time. You should hit balls in a way that lets your opponent warm up, and they should do the same for you. When your opponent comes to the net, for example, don't blast balls past her or right at her. Make sure she can practice her volley.

Don't Play Out Serves

If your opponent hits an obviously out serve, don't hit it back. Hit it into the net or let it roll into the fence behind you. Practicing your return makes your opponent wait to hit his second serve and may require him to clear the ball.

Question Only Once

If you think (or even know) your opponent has made a bad call, you can ask once (per point) for clarification and that's it. No matter how flagrant a bad call, you can't argue. If there's an official, you can ask for a referee to make calls, but it's impolite to keep challenging the same call — and, you might be wrong!

Practice Play

Please restrict practice play with multiple balls and baskets of balls to the back courts.
